THE LITTLE RED RIBBON.

I sing not of battles nor conquerors laden With trophies their valor has won in ng is the love of a shy little maiden miled upon me in the morning of life. ered my passion: though clumsily

With tear-shining lashes she heeded my with the ring of betrothal I plead for

The little red ribbon she wore in her hair. Though now it is faded
I picture it braided,
The way that it shimmered that night on the

stair;
And often I kiss it,
And think how I'd miss it—
The little red ribbon she wore in her hair. The years have flown by and her locks have grown whiter; I smile when she speaks of the gray in the I whisper to her that her glances are brighter,

Her dimples more witching than ever of old.
Our love-life has witnessed more laughing

How They Should Be Cared for by Mothers and Nurses.

CHILDREN'S TEETH.

Comparatively few mothers appreciate the importance of careful and systematic treatment of their children's teeth, writes Helen M. North, in Harper's Young People. This is as often the result of ignorance as of carelessness. It is a common supposition that little or no attention need be given the deciduous teeth, since their usefulness is limited to so short a period; and so the mother sees that her child is well clothed, warmed and fed, but neglects the little jew els without which his life may some day be very uncomfortable, and quite possibly very miserable. Others who insist on a certain degree of cleanliness, consider the dentist's care unnecessary for the little ones, though very important for themselves. And so hundreds of children grow to maturity with misshapen, unsightly, unhealthy teeth, a constant source of annoyance to their friends and of mortification or pain and disease to themselves.

Yet the reasons for exercising care commend themselves to every sensible mother. In the first place, the deciduous or milk teeth are much less firm and solid in text-ure than those of later growth, and decay much more rapidly. Upon their retention in the mouth a suitable time depend the beauty and regularity of the second growth. The general health of the child is not unfrequently influenced by the condition of the mouth, and here, as elsewhere, early training has a lasting influence on future development, and neglect can hardly be condemned too severely. Aside from con-siderations of utility, beauty and health, when one considers the amount of pain and discomfort possible to the two-and-thirty grinders, the best means of caring for and preserving them becomes a matter worthy of every mother's careful consideration. The diet of the child's first years rarely induces any but a healthy growth of teeth, but the best authorities advise that after the age of two and a half a dentist should be consulted once in six months to discover whether any chemical disintegration, techthird or fourth year at latest, the twenty teeth constituting the first set have made their appearance. This does not, of course, include the sixth-year molars, which belong to the permanent and not to the temporary set, as is sometimes supposed. From this time onward until the healthy formation of the second set, while the little one is too young to realize the importance of care, or later, when he is so crowded with the business of youth that his toilet is a matter of no moment to himself, the difficulty is greatest. At first the mother or nurse should conscientiously attend to this duty. The little scientiously attend to this duty. The little pearly points are very easily kept pure and white by the use of tepid water, and oc-casionally a mild dentifrice or detergent powder, applied with a soft brush of bad-ger's hair. The greatest care does not, how-ever, always prevent decay, and at the first appearance of pit or groove or dark spot, before the dentine has been injured, the dentist should be consulted, and if he thinks before the dentine has been injured, the dentist should be consulted, and if he thinks best, some one of the soft amalgam or tinfoil fillings should be applied. Filling a child's tooth, unless the pulp or nerve has been reached, is a very simple and painless process, both on account of the simple preparation necessary and of the plastic material used. It is a wise mother who thus early prevents the progress of deay, and early prevents the progress of decay, and saves her child the cruel impression of terror which is so generally associated with a visit to the dentist.

Many children suffer a great deal because of neglect at this period. The little teeth often become so tender that mastication is torture. Beefsteak and bread crusts, so essential to the health of a growing child, are entirely discarded of else swallowed without chewing, while indulgence in candies or any of the sweet delights of the childish palate is followed by exquisite pain. The stomach becomes disordered because denied stomach becomes disordered because denied its proper nourishment, and nervous aches its proper nourishment, and nervous aches in head and face are of frequent occurrence. Whatever the cause, it is a fact to which all mothers will assent, that the majority of children do not willingly take proper care of their teeth. Brushes are mislaid or destroyed, all possible excuses effered for the delay or entire suspension of this part of the toilet, and only the persevering, experienced mother will succeed in starting her children in the right way. Here as elsewhere in nursery discipline, "Thou shalt and "Thou shalt not" invite transgression. But children are easily influenced when an appeal is made to their common-sense. By the use of a hand-glass show the little boy or girl each one of his white teeth, and tell him how precious they are, since by no natural means can they be replaced. He becomes interested in his incisors, which cut like scissors, the eye-teeth just under the eyes, and the funny wrinkled-up molars, so useful for beef and mutton. Tell him of the larger, stronger teeth that are coming, warranted to last a lifetime if well cared for, and which are now hidden away in the gums, growing day by day, and awaiting their time to drive out the smaller and weaker milk-teeth. The little one may be roused to feeling an honest pride in the care of his new possessions. Teach him that it is as impolite to appear before his friends with unwashed teeth as with soiled hands, face, or linen. But perhaps the desirable result is most easily secured when a child has been so early accustomed to a clean, sweet Whatever the cause, it is a fact to which mouth that he can never be comfortable without it. The daily habit thus becomes a fixed custom, no more to be neglected or discontinued than the putting on of shoes and stockings. †

Especially should the mother be watchful

when the permanent set begins to appear. here should be no falling away of the small nilk-teeth from decay; but gradually their oots will be absorbed, until there is no onger a support for the crown, which then osens and, under favorable conditions, alls out, or may be gently removed with title or no pain, and as fair and clean as when it first appeared in the mouth. The econd tooth now appears; and if a little orethought has been taken to secure for it siently of room it is comely and healthy. But if forced to crowd its way around the lirst tooth, it becomes misshapen or proruding, and may seriously affect the shape of the mouth. A little manipulation properly applied may correct this fault.

Too great care can not be taken of these new arrivals. Their outer coating of mannel is hard, but not compact or durable, namel is hard, but not compact or durable, and does not reach its maximum density for nonths, sometimes not for years. They hould be kept clean by constant but not oo vigorous brushing. Five times a day is not too often-once after each meal, on cising, and again on retiring. If any treat-ment must be omitted, let it not be the last. In sleep, while the tongue and muscles of the mouth are at rest, particles of any sort which may not have been deposited have a much longer time to exert their perniciou influence than during the waking hours. A thread of floss silk waxed should be used at night between the teeth to dislodge any particles beyond the reach of the brush scoured once in a few weeks with a little pumice on a soft wooden toothpick or a bit of linen, but this must be done with great care, or the rough stone will injure the enamel. The healthfulness and beauty of the gums are promoted by the use of soft and fine brushes, and also by taking care to brush down on the upper teeth, and up, or away from the gums, on the lower. For toothpicks pigeon quills are preferred to any other for children's use.

Dentifrices and soap for the teeth are sufficiently numerous, but of very unequal merit. Soaps are liable to impart a yellow-ish hue to the enamel. Powders containing grit, and washes advertised to bleach the eth to a pearly hue, should be carefully avoided. Some teeth of very fine texture are not and never will be absolutely white, but it is a great mistake to use the patent bleaching washes, which usually contain some measure of acid which injures the enamel and shortens the life of the tooth Most dentists prepare healthful and pleas-ant tooth powders, which any child is pleased to use. Charcoal made into a paste with honey, and myrrh and oris root, either alone or in combination, form agreeable and iseful cleansing powders.

In regard to the extraction of teeth and other dental operations no less dreaded by adults than by children, we quote from Dr.

W. W. Allport:

"It is highly important that when children are taken to the dentist they should be treated in a manner not only free from all deceptions, but so as to give them the assurance that whatever may be done will be for their good. Deceptions are unnecessary. There is a much better way and a safer nol ey. Tell the truth at once, kindly and fa fully, without exaggeration. Appeal to their fortitude, their heroism. This method wiil go farther than the usual subterfuges of deceptions and sugar plums."

GEORGIA'S WILD BOY.

Strange Discovery of a Hunter in the Mount Alto Cliffs. The mysterious appearance of a lost child in the cliffs around Mount Alto, about six miles down the Coosa river, near the Rixey farm, says the Rome (Ga.) Tribune, is creating considerable excitement in neighborhood.

One day recently Crew Price took a hunt over the mountain ranges adjacent to the farm on which he resides. After he had been hunting some time he heard his dog barking at a lively rate on the opposite side of the mountain on which he was walking. As he got nearer the dog, he thought he had bayed some large animal and was afraid to attack it. But the astonishment of the hunter can be better imagined than described when he discovered that the dog had at bay a small boy on a cliff of a rock just above. The boy was apparently about ten years old, and rather small for his age. His clothes were ragged and torn, and the obttom ipart of his breeches were frayed into shreds around his ankles. He wore no hat nor coat, and his once white shirt was dirty and split in the back and front. His sleeves were almost torn into ribbons, leaving his arms exposed. When Mr. Price began talking to him the little fellow began crying, and would not answer the question asked as to whom he was or where he lived. The child soon began climbing up the rocks, and disappeared in the direction of Cedar Cliffs. As soon as gan camoing up the roots, and disappeared in the direction of Cedar Cliffs. As soon as possible, Mr. Price tried to ascend the precipitous side of the mountain to follow the boy. The hound tracked the lost child for some distance, but could not follow the trail after reaching Cedar Cliffs. The search was continued for some time but never a vestige of a trace could be found, from which it seems that the boy was well acquainted with his haunts. Mr. Price lives on the Rixey farm, but neither himself nor any other man in the neighborhood, who are accustomed to hunt squirrels and turkeys on the range of mountains, have ever seen or known of the child. Nothing more has been heard or seen of the lost boy since Mr. Price's discovery. There is talk of organizing a party of those living in the neighborhood to look for the boy, and find out who he is and how he was lost.

Attempted Suicide.

Special to the GAZETTE.] SAN FRANCISCO, May 3. - A man named J. O'Brien attempted suicide here to-day by swallowing laudanum, but was saved by hard work. He had formerly of Nevada:" "I've had a hard life, and die like a dog—a good enough fate for me, who might have prospered and been an honor to a good mother and an honored father in old Ireland. I have no money, and less hope of the future." It is said he was run out of Virginia in 1886 by the "601" for killing a man named Summerville, and afterwards went up to Bankers' Board of Directors. Boston, May 3 .- President Strong and Director Cheney of the Atchison system left for Topeka last night to be present at the annual meeting on May The somewhat surprising statement is made, and is apparently authoritative, that they will vote the company's proxies for the Kidder-Peabody ticket. There is a well-founded opinion that Strong will remain President of the company. It is learned that the new Board of Directors will be, in all probability, a dis-tinctively "bankers' Board."

W. H. Barnam's Funeral. LIME ROCK, Conn., May 3.-The funeral over the remains of Wm. H. Barnum were held at 1 P. M. at the Trinity Church. There were special trains from New York and Hartford, bringing mourners from all over the country. Among them were many prominent politicians, including ex-President Cleveland, Senator McDonald, Col. Bright of Indiana, Galvin S.

Brice, ex-Governor Loomis, C. M. Jordan and many other personal and political friends of the dead man.

In Three Days.

Three days is a very short time in which to cure a bad case of rheumatism, but it can be done, if the proper treatment is adopted, as will be seen by the following from James Lambert of New Brunswick, Ills.: "I was badly afflicted with rheumatism in the hips and legs, when I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It cured me in three days. I am all right to-day; and I would urge on everyone who is afflicted with that terrible disease to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm and get well at once." David Crosby Kills George Miller and Fatally Wounds Michael Egan in a Row.

Special to the GAZETTE.

VIRGINIA, May 3. - David Crosby shot and instantly killed George Miller and fatally wounded Michael Egan in front of the International Hotel at Virginia at a late hour last night. It seems that Miller and Egan had been drinking and fell in with Crosby, whom they began abusing, and as a result Crosby knocked Miller down and walked away, but the two men (Miller and Egan) followed him and said,

-, draw and defend yourself!" At that Crosby pulled his gun and commenced shooting, with the result as above stated. Crosby was placed under arrest and locked up.

The Enterprise contains the following additional particulars: Last even ing at about 9:30 o'clock Dave Crosby was accosted by George Miller, a discharged employe of Mr. Crosby, in front of the International Hotel. Miller said, "I want to know what you are talking about my mother for." Crosby answered, "I want no trouble with you; leave me alone; go away." Miller called Crosby a son of a bitch. and the latter struck him a powerful blow on the right ear, raising quite a

Michael Egan, who was in company with Miller, stood near by at the time, but that was the end of the first meet-

Dave Crosby then walked up C street towards his home. He walked as far as Cole's drug store, and stood there some time.

Joseph Mulcahy, Charles Creighton and William Counihan came along and found Crosby standing in front of the drug store. The latter accosted them and started to walk in their company, and told them that he had struck Miller, and that he thought he would be followed by Miller and his com-panion, but if they did to crawl through. Just then one of the young men turned and saw Miller and Egan following and told Crosby so. They walked along quietly until they reached Silver street, not far from Crosby's residence, when Miller called out to Crosby that he wanted to called out to Crosby that he wanted to have a talk with him. Crosby answered that he wanted nothing to do with him, and told him that if he crossed the street he would kill him. The parties had then approached within about twenty feet of Crosby's house. Upon this remark of Crosby's, Miller said: "Pull your gun, Crosby; pull your gun." That was all the young men heard. They turned to run down the street and had proceeded but a few feet when they heard two shots in rapid succession. Miller and Egan turned and ran north, and the young men heard Egan say as Miller was falling, letting himself down by putting one hand to the ground first, "Don't lay down there; he's got us, but I'm not going to fall."

Egan ran on until he got to Silver

CROSBY'S STATEMENT.

Crosby's account of the affair agree with the foregoing statement, except at the moment of the shooting. He says that he warned Miller not to follow him across the street; that Miller' followed him and caught hold of him by the coat collar after telling him to pull his gun, when he said, "Put your hand up to my ear where you hit me," and called him a ______.

Crosby again warned him to go away and that he wouldn't stand being called such names.

called such names. Just then Egan said, "You can't go in that house; you've got to fight," and while Miller had hold of him and and while Miller had hold of him and called upon him to draw his pistol, he (Crosby) having the pistol in his hand, thrust it against Miller and fired, and immediately fired at Egan, who was making a rush upon him. Crosby also said that he found Miller and Egan waiting for him as he passed Parking' drug store.

Perkins' drug store.

George Miller was shot very near the heart. The coat, which was buttoned with the upper button, showed a little round hole. There was no sign, whatever, of powder burn.

Michael Egan could not have been shot while making a rush upon Crosby, unless he rushed backwards. The bullet entered a little to the rear of the left side nearly directly opposite the bullet entered a little to the rear of the left side, nearly directly opposite the navel, and came out an inch over and a little to the left of the navel. No one can tell at the present writing whether the bowels were punctured or not, and his chances of recovery depend entirely upon that fact, His clothing shows a powder-burned hole fully two inches in diameter.

A Vainable Invention

H. T. Von Etlinger of San Francisco recently showed a GAZETTE reporter a "dry ore" concentrator that promises to revolutionize mining. It is a very simple affair, being no less than a drum with spiral shaped troughs that revolve, and the ore, after being crushed, is subjected to a uniform blast of air that drives the valueless parts of the crushing out at one end, while all that is valuable goes out the other end. The GAZETTE believes it to be a valuable invention and one calculated to revolutionize mining in working refractory ore.

AN EXCITED COMMUNITY.

Reported Rich Placer Mines in Douglas County.

The Carson Tribune of the 2d inst. says: All Douglas county is excited over discoveries made on the East Fork of the Carson river, and 200 acres of land have been already located. Placer mines of great richness are claimed to have been discovered. An assay made at the Bullion & Exchange Bank of a sandy loam, or black sulphuret, from the neighborhood indiscated above 200 for the terr. cated, shows $20,739 to the ton. The parties who made the dicovery are very mysterious in their movements, but enough has leaked out to set the grangers of Douglas county wild. A Livingston, of this city, was up making locations on Monday and goes upagain to-day. It is hoped that the least of the wild speculations will be realized, as it will be a grand thing for this section of the State.

A Needed Invention. A new envelope that will ensure the secrecy of correspondence has been invented. It is a patent and extremely ingenious. The envelope is made in the usual shape with the made in the usual shape with the exception that the flap is so long as to form a sort of a dog's ear, which turns over the right hand corner of the address side. The stamp is put partially on the flap and partially on the envelope paper. It will be difficult to tamper with the envelope.

A Vicious Cow. A cow while being driven along the streets of Sacramento Wednesday attacked Mrs. Meagher, knocking her against a fence and striking her a number of times. The cow was finally forced to desist, and the owner of the nimal straightened Mrs. Meagher out ipon the ground and went his way without stopping to determine if she had been badly injured.

To Dislodge the Enemy. When it takes the form of disease of the kidneys or bladder, is a task well nigh imasical maladies are more obstinate than any others. Counteract, therefore, the earliest indications of inactivity of the many organs with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which possesses among other excellent qualities, those of an efficient diuretic. The degree of stimulation apparent from its use reaches, but never goes beyond, the bounds of safety. It invigorates always, never irritates. Bright's disease, diabetes, catarrh of the bladder, are diseases successfully combatted in their incipiency with this benine medical stimulant and tonic. Besides reinforcents and regulating the kidneys and bladder, the Bitters is a specific for fever and ague, consumption and dyspersia.

It was maintained by the late Hor ace Greely, that "nothing succeed like success!" If this be true, Cham berlain's Cough Remedy will always be popular, as it never fails. It is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough, and is undoubtedly the best and most reliable medicine in use for those diseases. It is decidedly a success. ### MAKING NEW EYELIDS.

A Young Girl's Remarkable Es cape from Loss of Sight.

Desperate Chances Taken in an Operation on Badly-Burned Eyes—How a New York Surgeon Succeeded in Growing New Lids.

Among all the operations that a surgeon s called on to perform there is none that re-quires more skill, nerve and sound judgment quires more skill, nerve and sound judgment than those in which the eye is treated, writes a New York correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The eye is such an important factor in human life and the loss is attended with so much misery and despair, that surgeons are impressed with the responsibility, and particularly so, as the slightest slip of the knife may dash a person into eternal darkness.

There is the case of Annie Morgan, of this city, the daughter of a wealthy citizen. She

There is the case of Annie Morgan, of this city, the daughter of a wealthy citizen. She is about sixteen years old, and was a beauty, rich and rare, until her face was disfigured by an accident. She was of a studious disposition, and used to burn the midnight oil steadily in her room. Loud, piercing screams awakened the whole Morgan househaid several months ago. They came from Annie's room in the middle of the night, and it was thought that burglars had made their appearance. Everybody rushed there and found a bright flame on the floor from an overturned and broken lamp. There were overturned and broken lamp. There were groans coming from a pile of clothing on the bed, and when a big quilt was unrolled Annie was found with her clothing badiy burned and the upper part of her body hyd and with big blisters in many places. She had upset the iamp in some way, and the burning oil had been thrown over her. She retained her presence of mind, and, instead of fanning the flame by running around, she wrapped herself in a quilt and smothered the flame. This undoubtedly saved her life. A physician was summoned at once and Annie was removed to another room. The charred clothing was cut away with care, so as not to disturb the elevated epidermis, and the whole burned surface of the body was washed in a solution of creosote and water and then was covered with oil and a thick layer of cotton. Her face was greatly swollen, and she was in a comatose condition; the eyelids were raised, and it was seen that her eyes had not suffered as much as the surrounding tissue. This was undoubtedly due to the fact that Annie, being near. due to the fact that Annie, being near, sighted, had on a pair of glasses, and these protected the eyeballs from the first burst of the flame and frying oil. If she had been without the glasses both eyes would certainly have been destroyed, and even as it was their condition was bad enough. Her face was bathed in a soothing outment and then wrapped in cotton so arranged as to exclude the air from every part except on a line with the mouth and nostrils. Burns when extensive are not only very dangerous, but are slow to heal at all. Alternate hope and fear were the only outcome of the patient's condition for weeks.

The worst part of the wound was around the eyes, and special attention was paid to keeping the pus from getting into them and preventing inflammation. The sight in the eye was not normal, but this was due to the disturbance in the retina from inflammation rather than to any permanent defect in the eyes. After a long, patient and hard struggle the proper combination of internal and external remedies was discovered, and the condition was slowly improved, and finally the ulcers healed. The effect of the burn was horrible. condition for weeks. was slowly improved, and finally the ulvers healed. The effect of the burn was horrible. The lower part of the face was in fair shape, and time and care would wipe out the irregularities and leave little deformity, but the upper part would draw a sympathetic tear from a stone. The upper and lower eyelids on both eyes, under the influence of the paigen; in the tissue had shoughed. ence of the poison in the tissue, had sloughed away. Such a desperate state of affairs led the Such a desperate state of affairs led the doctor to take desperate chances. He waited until the paitent had recovered strength and then began the work of making new eyelids. He started on the right eye first, which was in the worst condition, as only a slight portion of each lid remained. Cocaine was applied to the eye and neighboring tissue until it became insensible. A slight portion of the flesh of the upper lid was made raw by scraping. A piece of tissue was cut from the patient's arm, just large enough to fit the raw edge; and was quickly applied to it. It was and was quickly applied to it. It was only a small strip, but it speedily settled the fact that the flesh would take root, and in a fact that the flesh would take root, and in a few days it had united naturally. The next step in the operation was to dissect a flap from the back of the right arm, near the wrist, leaving one end of the tissue intact. The arm was raised to the level of the eye and, while it was firmly held, was united to the upper lid with two sutures. Small strips of adhesive plaster were also applied to strengthen the union, and larger pieces and bandages were used to hold the arm firmly

The patient had to be watched constantly to prevent her from getting relief from the awkward situation by lying on her arm. When the arm became numb electricity was used to stimulate the circulation of the blood. Antiseptic dressings were applied frequently to the wound, and in two weeks the union had become strong enough to permit the flap to be severed. The eye was kept moist all the time with castor oil, and the new flesh was raised by small ivory supports. The patient remained in good health, and the left eye was operated upon.
There was no preliminary test used, and after the upper lid had been prepared a flap which had been cut from the left arm was introduced in the left arm was introduced to th joined to it with sutures and bandages. While this was becoming united the new lid on the right eye was trimmed to the right size, drawn down at the corners and made fast at the outer and inner angles. made fast at the outer and inner angles. The left lid made a more rapid union, and in ten days the arm was released. This lid was also trimmed and fitted into position. The wound healed splendidly, and was very encouraging. At the end of a month the entire tissue was covered with an unbroken membrane. Another flap was made on the right arm, when the inflammation had subsided, and attached to the under lid. This also made a good union, and the flap was severed in about ten days.

Id. This also made a good union, and the flap was severed in about ten days.

Work was begun upon the other eye in a few days. This part of the operation was very troublesome, as the edges of the flesh were not properly adjusted by reason of the patient jerking her nead from pain. There was considerable sloughing, but in time the wound became healthy and the flesh united. The under cyclids were shaped to meet the upper ones and were sutured. Careful watching prevented an accumulation of pus and the tissue healed rapidly. After they became toughened an opening was made in the lower cyclids into the little tear ducts, which were kept dilated by a small bone drain tube about the size of a needle. Enough fluid was discharged from the lids to keep the eyes moist. This was considered romarkable, as the little glands were atmost totally destroyed. The patient is now able to move the lids with the muscles of the forehead and cheek, and this gives an odd expression to her face. Her sight is good, and when she has glasses on the deformity can not be noticed except on close inspection, and the hids serve all the purposes of those that were destroyed.

GORGEOUS COSTUMES.

The Cost of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt' Exquisite Wardrobe. "At the beginning of last season I or dered a round dozen of ball dresses from Worth, and not one is fit to wear again," said Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt to a friend the other day, according to the New York When one thinks of the filmsy tulles and

When one thinks of the filmsy talles and gauzes, the delicate laces and satins which form the present materials for evening dresses, and then counts the rough treatment such cobweb goods receive in a crowded ball-room, this is not to be wondered at. The chief beauty of a ball dress is its freshness, and at a second wearing this will be entirely lost. The most simple gown of white tulle garlanded with lilies or hyacinths costs at the least 2300 when made by Worth. The same gown could be made by Worth. The same gown could be made at home for $30, but where would be the bliss in wearing it!

Mrs. Vanderbilt's most expensive ball dress cost $600, and yet it was a very simple dress to the masculine eye, at least. She wore it on the evening of her own ball, and without a single jewel. It was a delicate lilac satin, made with a court train and cut low in the neck; the skirt was hand-em-broidered with clusters of lilacs, touched with tiny gold beads, and the entire drease was draped in lilac tulle run with threads of gold.

One of the most inexpensive ball dresses was made in town, and was of silver satin brocade and white faille silk, the brocade forming the court train. This gown cost but $300 and was made by a modifie. but $300, and was made by a modiste up-

Her dinner and opera dresses are always very handsome—rich brocades and velvets, satins and laces being used. Most of them are made in town. One little gem is a pearly satin, looking like silver, the entire front of the gown and the corsage being a mass of steel beads. Panels of dove-gray velvet are introduced at the sides, and the bodice is entirely of the velvet. Another is of pansy-velvet brocaded in the flower and combined with plain satin of the same

As for tea gowns, she seldom wears them, not earing to change her dress more than three times a day, but she has four or five which she wears at her "at homes."

The sum of $10,000 was spent for imported dresses and wraps last fall, and the summer wardrobe for wear at Newport has just been ordered at a similar cost. Five wraps, all exceptionally handsome, have been worn this winter by Mrs. Vanderbilt. A sealskin dolman, costing $2,500; an opera cloak of white silk, lined with ermine, which was imported for $2,000; a small jet wrap, a plush wrap and a short, braided jacket were the other three.

"It keeps three women constantly employed making Mrs. Vanderbilt's underwear," said a young woman at the Woman's Exchange the other day. "She always has every article made by hand, and as the sheerest cambrics and finest linens are used the work is slow. She prefers Torchon or Valenciennes lace trimmings to embroidery, and a great many sets are of drawn work.

"Besides the garments made by these three women, I believe she has silken underwear imported, and a set of three pieces costs over $150. I should think she spe about $1,000 a year on underwear and as much more on lingerie and handkerchiets. The latter are always hemstitched by hand, and she uses as many as six dozen a year. You know society women never have pockets and are always losing their handker-

As for bonnets, gloves, stockings and shoes, Mrs. Vanderbilt has all of these articles imported to match her dresses, and at a yearly expense of $500 for bonnets and the same amount for the other three articles. She only orders two pairs of walking shoes each year, and these have been made for years by a Russian, in St. Petersburg, who fits her to perfection. With $15,000 for dresses—twelve for balls, ten for dinners and receptions, fifteen for summer wear another $5,000 for wraps, $500 for bonnets. $1,000 for underwear, $500 for gloves and shoes, $1,000 for lingerie and handkerchiefs. and $2,000 for parasols, combs, hairpins and the thousand little articles that women wear, and it is not difficult to see how easily $25,000

William's "Magie Potion."

The Paris Temps has at last revealed the secret of the hatred of the Emperor of Russia against Emperor William of Germany. The "trustworthy" French paper is indebted for the secret to a still more "reliable" correspondent in Upper Bavaria, the old home of lays and legends. It is firmly believed by all the good rustics of Bavaria, says the report, that Emperor William is gifted with supernatural powers—in fact, a wizard. By his enchantments he has obtained a magic potion prolonging life, and communicated some of it to his indispensable servants, Bismarck and Moltke. The Emperor of Russis went to Berlin last fall for the sole purpose of obtaining some of the magic draught, the only infallible protection from the dreadful Nihilist. But William refused. He had hardly enough of it for himself, and could not spare any for the Czer. So the latter departed in a fury and gave orders for his army to concentrate upon the German frontier.
